Fascinated By Movement or Think You'd Like to Be?

Restoring effective, efficient, confident movement is both a science and an art. Leave prescriptive rehabilitation pathways behind and expand your horizons with an engaging, effective & motivating approach designed to equip you with the skills & principles to address a wide variety of musculoskeletal presentations.

Gain a new set of tools for targeted assessment & treatment, & restore a sense of creativity & confidence in your work. Using the evidence base as a source of innovation rather than limitation, JEMS Movement A.R.T. (Analysis, Rehabilitation and Treatment) opens a window on the key foundations for efficient, effective, natural movement for rehabilitation, wellbeing & performance.

- Facilitate a greater sense of ease in your patients by learning to unlock their potential for elastic, robust movement.
- Identify the most effective start point for your programme by using simple, relevant movement tests to uncover the patient's natural strategies for force management. Address the cause, not just the symptoms.
- Learn a fresh approach to posture, based on natural reflexes & sensory cues.
- Develop an "expert eye" for movement.
- Learn effective new skills in verbal and tactile cueing to facilitate motor performance.
- Reflect the current evidence by smoothly evolving beyond the "stability" concept to create integrated programmes systematically, simply and progressively.
- Through understanding Functional Force Management (FFM), understand how to make assessment & treatment choices which reflect the patient's individual functional requirements. Know where you are heading and ensure that you have the bases covered using clear pathways.

About the COURSE

*“A complete clinical game changer.”
“Transformative.”*

These intensely practical courses comprise Parts 1 & 2 of the JEMS Movement A.R.T. pathway leading to optional certification.

The JEMS Movement A.R.T. courses equip participants with the ability to work relevantly & effectively with patients across a wide variety of presentations. This is a clinical course pathway which includes clinical scenarios & problem solving over a range of neuromusculoskeletal presentations, & as such the pre requisite for the course is an Advanced Diploma or Degree in a related field with a rehabilitation focus. The course may also be suitable for clinical related Diploma graduates with extensive clinical & rehabilitation experience and appropriate post graduate CPD. Please contact us for clarification.

“This is the one approach that I can use for absolutely everyone.”

About JEMS

Developed over twenty years by performance movement and rehabilitation expert Joanne Elphinston to address a wide range of rehabilitation and performance needs, JEMS educates health, performance and rehabilitation professionals to appreciate the bigger picture regarding movement.

JEMS encourages its participants to think critically and scientifically but creatively, and to meet the unique needs of their patients or clients with both technical excellence and enjoyment.

JEMS is used by practitioners around the world to help their clients to move for success in sports or the performing arts, to overcome injury and succeed in rehabilitation, and to simply enjoy the potential of their bodies.

Take advantage of the rare opportunity to complete both Parts 1 & 2 of the four part JEMS Movement A.R.T. certification pathway currently running in Europe. Part 2 will not be run again until after Parts 3 and 4 are completed in Australia in 2016.

About our Presenters

Joanne Elphinston

The creator of JEMS, Joanne Elphinston, is a leading performance consultant in elite sport and the performing arts, a practicing physiotherapist specialising in chronic disorders, and a respected international lecturer and author in the fields of movement and rehabilitation.

In addition to her intensive teaching in the UK and internationally for over fifteen years, Joanne's clients include Olympic athletes in both summer and winter sports in the UK and abroad, professional athletes such as footballers and golfers, contemporary and ballet dancers, and top classical musicians. She has provided consultancy to organisations including the Football Association (FA), the British Olympic Association, Royal Yachting Association, British Canoe Union, England Athletics, England Badminton and the Golfing Union of Wales among many others, and implemented the first injury prevention programmes for musicians at the Royal Welsh College of Music and Drama and the National Dance Company of Wales.

Joanne's work has been integrated into many fields, from child development through to falls prevention, musculoskeletal performance to neurological recovery, and it is loved by its practitioners for its straightforward solutions for linking function to presentation in a systematic, integrated, holistic yet scrupulously reasoned and evidence based approach to physical performance.

Joanne's work is the subject of current and ongoing research at Karolinska Institute, Stockholm.

Kent Fyrth

Top JEMS instructor, Kent Fyrth, is a highly experienced physiotherapist practicing an integrated philosophy across a diverse range of clients, ranging from elite sports and performing arts medicine (professional dancers and musicians) to chronic musculoskeletal pain and headache.

Kent's sporting clients have included numerous Welsh squads including shooting, hockey, golf, tennis and lawn bowls, as well as the Royal Yachting Association of Great Britain. He was the Head Physiotherapist for Welsh Netball for nine years, and has looked after professional ballet and contemporary dancers for over a decade, as well as the musicians from the BBC National Orchestra of Wales, Welsh National Opera and Royal Welsh College of Music and Drama.

Kent is qualified in Somatic Experiencing, an approach developed to increase a sense of ease in the body in order to resolve symptoms of trauma and stress which are expressed physically, and with advanced qualifications in Manipulative Physiotherapy and Clinical Pilates (Dance Medicine Australia) in addition to JEMS, Kent brings a wealth of knowledge
